

MISS JOO WRITES

Notes on Becoming

January

A gentle reflection journal for anyone learning to move slower and trust what's unfolding.

2026

Dear one,

January didn't arrive the way I expected. I thought a new year would bring clarity.. a sense of direction, maybe even a fresh start I could feel in my bones. Instead, it brought stillness. The kind that makes you uncomfortable because there's nowhere to hide.

But maybe that's exactly what I needed.

This month taught me that not everything needs to come with me into a new year. Some habits, some guilt, some versions of myself.. they did their job. They taught me what I needed to learn. And now they can stay where they belong.

This journal is an invitation to sit with that same stillness. To look honestly at what you're carrying and ask yourself.. does this still belong here?

You don't need answers yet. You just need honesty.

With love,

Miss Joo

Blog Recap & Highlights

1. What I'm leaving behind without guilt — January 8
2. This version of me feels unfamiliar, and that's okay — January 13
3. I'm learning to choose myself without explaining — January 20
4. January taught me to slow down — January 27

QUOTES TO SIT WITH

Some things were never meant to be carried into a new year. They did their job. They taught me.

Growth doesn't always feel empowering. Sometimes it feels quiet. Sometimes it feels lonely.

Choosing myself doesn't have to be loud or defensive. It doesn't need a speech.

Maybe growth doesn't need pressure. Maybe becoming doesn't need a deadline.

Reflections for This Month

REFLECTION 1

Leaving behind

What are 3 things you're choosing to leave behind this year.. without explaining why?

REFLECTION 2

The unfamiliar self

Is there a version of you emerging that feels unfamiliar? What does she do differently?

REFLECTION 3

Choosing yourself

Where in your life have you been waiting for permission to choose yourself? What would it look like to stop waiting?

GUIDED REFLECTIONS

REFLECTION 4

Stillness check-in

When was the last time you sat in complete silence with yourself? What came up?

REFLECTION 5

Fill in the blanks

I used to believe _____ .

Now I'm learning _____ .

This year, I'm giving myself permission to _____ .

A Letter to Last Year

Write a short letter to 2025. Thank it for what it taught you. Tell it what you're leaving behind. Tell it what you're taking with you.

Dear 2025,

What I'm Grateful For

Three things from this month that I want to hold onto.

1

2

3

One feeling I want to carry into February:

My intention for next month:

"Not moving was sometimes the most honest thing I could do."

— NOTES ON BECOMING, JANUARY

Miss Joo Writes

missjoowrites.com · @missjoo98