Notes on Becoming

May

A gentle reflection journal for anyone learning to move slower and trust what's unfolding.

2026

Dear one,

May felt like arriving somewhere I'd been walking toward for a long time.. without realizing I was already there.

This month wasn't about breakthroughs. It was about looking back and realizing how far I've come. The version of me who started this year.. she was still shrinking. Still proving. Still waiting for permission.

But this version? She's here. Taking up space. Not loudly, but honestly.

This journal is for anyone who's done the quiet work of becoming and is finally starting to feel it. You don't need to prove you've changed. You don't need applause. You just need to keep going.

The hardest part is behind you. Trust that.

With love,

Miss Joo

Blog Recap & Highlights

1. What peace actually looks like for me — May 5
2. I don't need to prove I've changed — May 12
3. Gratitude for the version of me who kept going — May 19
4. This is the season I stopped shrinking — May 26

QUOTES TO SIT WITH

Peace isn't something I've arrived at. It's something I practice. Daily. Imperfectly. Intentionally.

Growth doesn't need a stage. It doesn't need applause.

She survived every single thing that tried to break her. And I'm here because of her.

This isn't arrogance. It's arrival.

Reflections for This Month

REFLECTION 1

Your definition of peace

Forget the dictionary. What does peace actually look like in YOUR daily life? Describe a peaceful day.

REFLECTION 2

Unseen growth

What's something you've grown through that no one else will ever fully understand? Write it here.. just for you.

REFLECTION 3

Thank-you note

Write a few lines to a past version of yourself. The one who got through the hardest season. What would you tell her?

GUIDED REFLECTIONS

REFLECTION 4

Taking up space

Where in your life have you been shrinking? What would it look like to take up the full space you deserve?

REFLECTION 5

Fill in the blanks

Peace for me is not _____. Peace for me is

_____.

I no longer need to prove _____.

The version of me who kept going deserves to hear _____.

Before & After

On the left, write words that describe who you were at the start of this year. On the right, write words that describe who you are now. No full sentences. Just words. Just honesty.

What I'm Grateful For

Three things from this month that I want to hold onto.

A version of myself I want to honor:

My intention for June:

"I think this is the version of me I was always becoming.. the one who stops shrinking and starts living."
