

MISS JOO WRITES

Notes on Becoming

March

A gentle reflection journal for anyone learning to move slower and trust what's unfolding.

2026

Dear one,

March arrived before I was ready for it.

The season changed, the light shifted, and suddenly the world was asking me to bloom when I was still processing winter. But I'm learning that growth doesn't wait for readiness. It just needs willingness.

This month, I noticed changes in myself I couldn't name. Quiet shifts. The kind that don't make for good stories but reshape everything from the inside out. I also started paying attention to the people around me.. noticing who stays without being asked and who only shows up when it's convenient.

This journal is for the in-between moments. The ones where you're not quite who you were, but not yet who you're becoming. Trust the middle.

With love,

Miss Joo

Blog Recap & Highlights

1. Some shifts don't need to be announced — March 3
2. I'm starting to feel at home in my own company — March 10
3. Spring came before I felt ready — March 17
4. The people who stay don't need convincing — March 24
5. I stopped waiting for the right moment — March 31

QUOTES TO SIT WITH

The most meaningful shifts are the ones that happen between you and yourself. No audience required.

Loneliness is the ache of disconnection. Solitude is the comfort of reconnection.. with yourself.

The right people don't need convincing. They see you.. even in your quiet seasons.. and they stay anyway.

I'd rather be someone who tried before she was ready than someone who waited until the moment had already passed.

Reflections for This Month

REFLECTION 1

The quiet shift

What has changed in you recently that no one else has noticed? Describe it.

REFLECTION 2

Your own company

How do you feel when you're alone? Has that feeling changed? Write about your relationship with solitude.

REFLECTION 3

Who stays?

Think of someone who stays without being asked. What makes that relationship different?

GUIDED REFLECTIONS

REFLECTION 4

Ready or not

What's something you've been waiting to feel "ready" for? What would it look like to begin anyway?

REFLECTION 5

Fill in the blanks

I'm not the same person who started this year. The biggest change is _____.

Home feels like _____.

I stopped waiting for _____ and started _____.

A Letter to Someone Who Stayed

Write a short letter to someone who has stayed in your life without needing to be convinced. You don't have to send it. Just let them know what their presence means.

Dear _____,

What I'm Grateful For

Three things from this month that I want to hold onto.

1

2

3

A quiet shift I want to honor:

My intention for April:

*"Maybe growth doesn't need you to be ready.
Maybe it just needs you to not resist it."*

— NOTES ON BECOMING, MARCH

Miss Joo Writes

missjoowrites.com · @missjoo98